Coverage Analyst, CAT-9, $4149.60

Advices the Chief, Broadcast Information Section, or Chief, Field Division, in the allocation of broadcast coverage to field bureaus on the basis of personal research as follows:

Determines whether changes in propagation conditions or changes in frequencies and broadcast times verified in the section's daily operations indicate possibility of better coverage at other missions than where formerly assigned.

Determines optimum location for coverage of new transmissions verified in the section's daily operations.

Reviews field bureau files of broadcast material (approximately 110,000 words daily) to determine adequacy of coverage of transmissions assigned to the several bureaus and to report recurring duplications of material from different sources.

By comparison of field bureau copy with published material and by consultation with Editorial Division staff members, discovers and reports segments of broadcast material regularly filed to headquarters by field missions but not utilized, or only partially utilized, in publications.

Acts as deputy to the section chief, Transmitter Specialist, and replaces him during his absence.
